Project Description

TechCamp is a program that brings innovative technologies to populations overseas in an effort to address top policy challenges. You can find out more about our program on our website: techcamp.america.gov. We work on issues ranging from combatting illegal mining in Peru to promoting women's entrepreneurship and shared practices between India and Pakistan. We have a lot of great success stories from our work all over the world, and we need your help in translating the data into action!

We're looking for someone to join our impact and evaluation team that can help us organize data and create shareable and impactful data visualizations that we can use on social media, the website, and internally with our stakeholders. We'd also like someone with an eye for detail that can organize our existing data, identify redundancies, and point out interesting impact stories waiting to be told.
